

Lisa Beeman - more pork

From: "Nancy C. Lineman" <nlineman@yahoo.com>
To: <nlineman@dhr.state.md.us>
Date: 5/3/2010 6:56 PM
Subject: more pork

Foster family placement company submits corrective action plan

Contemporary Family Services says it didn't discriminate against Muslim woman who doesn't allow pork in her home

By Brent Jones, The Baltimore Sun
 6:10 PM EDT, May 3, 2010

A company that denied a Baltimore woman the chance to become a foster mother after discovering she doesn't allow pork in her home defended its decision in a state-ordered corrective action plan, saying the woman lacks the flexibility needed to work with children.

<http://view.atdmt.com/>

Hyattsville-based Contemporary Family Services, which is authorized by the state to place foster children with families, said [REDACTED] — a practicing Muslim — was unyielding in her stance, which in turn, could make her intractable in other issues involving children. Crudup initially had cleared a screening process and completed hours of training before her application was denied after a home visit from a CFS worker in August 2009.

Access

[REDACTED] took her case to the American Civil Liberties Union, which filed a complaint on her behalf with the Baltimore City Community Relations Commission, claiming religious discrimination. The commission is investigating the case and will set a hearing date.

Maryland's Office of Licensing and Monitoring, meanwhile, sent a letter to CFS outlining state discrimination laws and ordering the company to comply. The department also asked CFS to file a corrective action plan within 10 days.

CFS said in its response that it did not discriminate against [REDACTED]. The company said it will now provide documentation of its nondiscriminatory policy to all parents and prospective parents.

Corey Pierce, chief operating officer for CFS, said his agency has never discriminated against potential foster parents and has clients of all religions and races.

"Why would we discriminate against her? Our issues with her are legitimate. It's not about religion, and